This is the latest clearly dated dirham from the famous port town of Siraf in Fars, which would indicate that there was a brief revival in its fortunes after a catastrophic earthquake which put an end to its prosperity and contributed directly to the commercial success of Sohar on the coast of Oman.

- 39 Ghurid, Ghiyath al-din Mahmud (558-599h), gold dinars (2), mint and date off flan, wts. 4.06gms. and 4.05gms. (A.1783.3), both about fine, rare (2) £400-500

This is the only gold coin which was definitely struck under the authority of the great conqueror Timur (Tamerlaine), and is only very occasionally available.

- 45 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Nasir al-din Shah (1264-1313h), gold double toman/20,000 dinars, Tihran 1264/1299h, wt. 5.75gms. (KM.Y19), about extremely fine, rare £400-500

- 46 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Nasir al-din, gold toman/10,000 dinars, Tihran 1264/1310h, wt. 2.88gms. (KM.22), uncirculated, very rare £600-800

This is a one year type that shows the Shah with a new elaborate ornament on his headdress.

- 47 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Nasir al-din, gold half toman/5,000 dinars, Tihran (1)3(0)5h, wt. 1.49gms. (KM.17), uncirculated £300-400

The Tehran mint at this time was quite casual about the accuracy of its coin dates.

- 48 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Muzaffar al-din Shah (1313-1324h), gold toman/10,000 dinars, Tihran 1314/1316h, wt. 2.85gms. (KM.36), uncirculated £300-400

- 50 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Muhammad 'Ali Shah (1324-1327h), gold 5 qirans/5,000 dinars, (Tihran) 1327h, plain edge pattern, wt. 22.59gms. (Rabino di Borgomale, Coins, Medals and Seals of the Shahs of Iran 686; KM.A50), extremely fine, very rare £1500-2000

The currency strikes of this crown size coin are normally very crude, and do not do justice to the attractive dies from which they were struck. This coin deserves a place in any cabinet of modern Islamic coins.

- 51 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Ahmad Shah (1327-1344h), gold toman/10,000 dinars, (Tihran) 1332h, wt. 2.82gms. (KM.81), uncirculated, a very rare date £200-300

This is the earliest confirmed date for a toman issued by the last Qajar Shah.

- 52 Qajar Shahs of Iran, Ahmad Shah, gold half toman/5,000 dinars, Tihran 1337h, wt. 1.34gms. (KM.80), extremely fine £200-300

- 53 Pahlawi Shahs of Iran, temp. Rida/Reza Shah (1344-1360h), gold toman struck for Nawruz 1305hs (Tihran) 1305h, wt. 2.82gms. (Borgomale 86; KM.119), softly struck, uncirculated, very rare £1200-1500

This is the first coin struck by the new Shah as a Nawruz donative before his actual enthronement. It is the last of the traditional gold tomans first struck by Nasir al-din Qajar and the first to show the newly introduced solar hijri date on an Iranian coin. It is an interesting transitional piece between the old and the new currencies.

- 54 Inakid Khans of Khiva, Muhammad Amin Khan (1261-1271h), gold half tilla, Dar al-Saltinat Khwarazm 1270h, wt. 2.27gms. (A.3082), extremely fine and rare £400-600

Although these two coins are virtually identical in appearance, the dates are differently placed on the obverse and reverse of both. Apparently the die-sinkers fitted the dates in virtually at random on this Central Asian coinage.

On 20th April 1584 an indenture was signed with Sir Richard Martin, warden and master worker, and Andrew Palmer, comptroller at the Tower Mint in London, to strike gold double nobles of 30/- and ryals of 15/- at the ancient fine gold standard of 23 cts. 3½ grs., to finance the expedition of the Earl of Leicester to the Netherlands in 1585. English nobles had long been accepted as a standard currency in the Netherlands, so they therefore provided the natural medium for financing the British Expedition. Between 3rd May 1584 and 31st January 1587 the sum of £27,936 was struck in these two denominations - a very small issue consisting of about 15,000 double nobles and fewer than 3000 ryals (compared to at least 100,000 angels of 10/- during the same period).

As can be clearly seen by these figures, the striking of ryals of 15/- was extremely small. Few were struck bearing mm. A, so the majority bore the mm. escallop. The mintmark was placed on the reverse only and no overstruck mintmarks have ever been recorded.

Despite their great scarcity, most extant specimens are somewhat worn and clipped, so the coin offered here is one of a very few available in such an excellent state of preservation. Moreover, it is of good weight at 112 grains. This is a highly desirable piece as it is one of the best examples available.

A Highly Desirable Briot Pattern Set, re-creating a unique Montagu grouping

- 83 A group of Charles I patterns by Nicholas Briot - a most unusual and impossible-to-replicate offering that comprises a grouping of coins – groat to penny – that were together in Cuff, Berne and Montagu. Three of the coins are the same (including the unique half groat); the penny was bought by the British Museum in Montagu. But this set offers the only other penny (out of Murdoch), which is actually superior to the Montagu specimen. As the superb provenances show, these coins have attracted remarkable loyalty from collectors seeking to maintain the grouping together – the groat and threepence have been together since before 1850, bar fourteen years! We feel it is important to keep the coins together and are therefore selling them in one lot, with original tickets, consisting of:

Although North gives a rarity estimate of only R, the cataloguer believes this piece to be unique.

Charles I, Tower mint, pattern penny, undated, CAR DG MAG BRIT F ET H R, crowned bust l., rose and I behind, rev. IVSTITIA THRONVM FIRMAT, shield of arms on cross fourchée (N.2691 [VR]), pleasing light grey tone, good very fine

Spink states one of two known, the other purchased by the British Museum at the Montagu sale as lot 403 in 1896, therefore this example is unique in private hands.

Montagu graded his penny only 'very fine' whereas the groat, threepence and half groat are graded as 'extremely fine' in the Montagu catalogue. Therefore it seems that this 'good very fine' example is superior to the BM coin; Murdoch, who bought the unique half groat in Montagu, and owned the only other penny, was presumably content to own the better coin.

A matched and pleasingly toned set of patterns, sharp in all details, with superior flans. A rare opportunity! £12,500-15,000

This was the first coin issued by Rajah Brooke for his newly established private 'country'. The keping denomination was the standard of the current money of the archipelago, hundreds of millions of kepings being imported from England and issued from Singapore all through the 1830s and 1840s. The Sarawak keping is so rare that it was unlikely to have been struck in any significant quantity. However, either the mintage sufficed until 1863 when new coins arrived from Birmingham denominated in 'cents', or Rajah Brooke was consumed with other matters and allowed local circulation to be supplied by anything that was available – the situation in virtually all countries in Great Britain's far flung empire and even in the British Isles themselves until 1816. The neighbouring Straits Settlements received its first coinage in 1845, comprising quarter, half and one cents, and when Sarawak ordered new coinage in 1863 it followed suit. While the Straits introduced a silver coinage in 1871, it was not until 1900 that Sarawak, under Charles Brooke, ordered its own silver coinage.
